

In the light of you is a collaborative photographic project where participants adhere to a sort of format that I invented and that I want to share. It's about making two people meet in a space (like in the photos I'm posting on Instagram) by placing them in front of each other. It is a performative act which has the aim of evoking the need for people to meet and not live apart. It starts from the situation created by Covid but only as food for thought. The project is open and you can participate by sending me your images. It is necessary to send a file of at least 3000 pixels long side because for the Instagram version it is necessary to make a crop of the image.

As you can see, the photograph must be level, there must be no aberrations or optical distortions. They can be made in the city, as in the countryside, at the seaside and there can be other people in the frame as long as they do not disturb the tension that is generated between the two main figures. Mask if you want or if the law requires it. A very important thing is the people's posture: they must never have a comfortable or relaxed pose but be with their shoulders straight in front of each other. Small variations are obviously accepted, the important thing is to maintain a tension between the two. Still with regard to the figures, they must not be too close or too large in the frame. Once you have the photo (s) you can send it to me via email to giorgiobarrera@gmail.com.

The aim is primarily to create relationships, but in the meantime I am working to get the project out in magazines, obviously, it will depend on whether we succeed, even making it an exhibition and one or more publications. If you need details please send a message through the Instagram account.

Best wishes, Giorgio
